Lara and her brother, Tommy, always play together. Their favourite activity after school is to watch cartoons on TV. During this time, their mother brings them tea and snacks. Lara and Tommy are always together and their parents are very happy and proud as the two never fight.

Soon, the rainy season starts. A cyclone hits Mauritius and the radio announces that schools will remain closed for one whole week.

“Lara, I am so bored! We cannot have online classes as there is no electricity. I miss my friends and my teacher,” says Tommy.

“I cannot even play my favourite games as my phone’s battery is dead. I don’t know how I will spend the week,” Lara replies.

Their parents are sad for them. Then, the parents have an exciting idea. They go to the shed and bring out old board games such as Monopoly, Snakes and Ladders and Scrabble. The children look at the games and exclaim:

“How are we going to play these games? They are so outdated!”

Both parents share a smile with each other and start a round of Monopoly. The game seems interesting and Lara joins in. Tommy watches them and soon, he changes his mind when he sees his sister winning and that she is even enjoying the game.
