Question 2B (20 marks)Read the text below.

My grandmother, who lives with us, was seventy on the tenth of December last year and my parents decided to hold a special celebration for her birthday. They invited all my aunts, uncles and cousins, as well as our neighbours and some of Grandmother's close friends.

The party was planned for the evening. All our relatives came early to help with the preparations and to cook the food. Grandmother's advice was very useful when it came to preparing the curry as she is an expert in mixing spices. My cousins and I decorated the sitting room while my uncles got the drinks ready. In the meantime, the birthday cake was collected from the nearby bakery. It was an enormous square chocolate cake, beautifully decorated with cream and slices of fresh fruits.

At six o'clock, the party started with all the guests gathering around the table to see Grandmother cutting her cake. Pink and green candles formed a giant number 70 on top of it. Everybody sang "Happy Birthday" and clapped when she blew out the candles and cut the cake. Grandmother's eyes filled with tears of joy. She was so pleased to see the love and care with which her family had organised the event. We all helped ourselves to a thick slice of the delicious cake which soon disappeared!

Dinner was served at eight and everyone said the curry was very tasty. Afterwards the music and dancing began and some of the children volunteered to sing. My parents, uncles and aunts talked cheerfully in the sitting room while my cousins and I had plenty of fun.
