Question 2B (20 marks)Read the text below.

My neighbour, Mr Mali, is a driver in a nearby sugar estate. However, before starting work at seven in the morning, he has another activity which brings an additional income for his family. At the back of his house, he grows a variety of vegetables like tomatoes, carrots, beans and some green leafy vegetables, and a range of herbs like thyme, coriander and mint.

Every morning, before sunrise, Mr Mali is already in his garden. He ploughs the soil and prepares the beds. His wife helps him to sow the seeds, water the plants and pick the vegetables. Sometimes, their son, who is my classmate, joins them to do odd jobs like filling the watering cans or throwing away the litter.

Mr Mali usually sells his produce to a vegetable seller in the village market. People in the neighbourhood also buy herbs and vegetables from Mr Mali's garden. They are always full of praise for the quality and freshness of the products.

Mrs Mali grows fruit trees and flowers in her yard as a hobby. In her front garden one can admire beautiful roses, marigolds and bright coloured zinnias. "I am not a florist. My flowers are too precious for me to sell them," she says to people who offer to buy her flowers.

Sometimes, in the morning, I watch them from my window. I would have liked to join them just for fun. But I don't think it is fun to wake up so early every day. It is also not enjoyable to work so hard before going to school or work.
